DETAILED ACTION

1. Applicant's arguments, see pages 4 and 5, filed Aug. 3, 2005, with respect to the rejection(s) of claim(s) 1-3 and 5-7 under 35 U.S.C. 103 have been fully considered and are persuasive. Therefore, the rejection has been withdrawn. However, upon further consideration, a new ground(s) of rejection is made in view of Dong et al (U.S. Patent No. 6,210,807, cited in previous office action).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

2. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

3. Claims 1-3 and 5-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The claims are indefinite because it is not clear as to "surface roughness is 3.0 Rz less". The term "Rz" is known in the art to stand for the surface roughness and not the unit of the surface roughness. As such it is not clear as to the measurement of the surface roughness.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

4. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

5. Claims 1, 5-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Dong et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,210,807, now Dong)

Art Unit: 1742

Dong disclose treating titanium article by gas oxidation the titanium article at a temperature in the range of 500-725 C for 0.5 to 100 hrs, Dong further teaches the time and temperature is selected such as to produce an adherent surface compound layer containing at least 50% by weight of oxides of titanium and a thickness of 0.2 to 2 micron, col. 3, l. 2-10. Dong further teaches the treated articles have low coefficient of friction and good resistance to sliding wear against metal or non-metal conterfaces both lubricated and un-lubricated, col. 3, l. 66 to col. 4, l. 1. Dong therefore implicitly has determined the effectively thickness of the hard oxide film and the effective surface roughness of the hard oxide film since it is known in the art that surface roughness relates to friction coefficient and that lower surface roughness improves friction coefficient. While Dong does not teach the surface roughness, however since the titanium article is treated at the temperature as claimed and has the thickness within the claimed range it inherently has the claimed effective surface roughness.

"Where the claimed and prior art products are identical or substantially identical in structure or composition, or are produced by identical or substantially identical processes, a prima facie case of either anticipation or obviousness has been established, In re Best, 195 USPQ 430, 433 (CCPA 1977). 'When the PTO shows a sound basis for believing that the products of the applicant and the prior art are the same, the applicant has the burden of showing that they are not.' In re Spada, 15 USPQ2d 1655, 1658 (Fed. Cir. 1990). Therefore, the prima facie case can be rebutted by evidence showing that the prior art products do not necessarily possess the characteristics of the claimed product. In re Best, 195 USPQ 430, 433 (CCPA 1977)."

Regarding claim 6, Dong discloses shot peening the resultant treated article in claim 10. As for claim 7, Dong teaches the claimed limitation by disclosing that titanium article which has been oxidized includes valve spring retainers for use in internal combustion engine, col. 3, l. 50-52.
